

Prof Dr. med. S. Kriemler is a board certified pediatrician and epidemiologist and has done both clinical work and research. She works as senior researcher at the Epidemiology, Biostatistics and Prevention Institute (EBPI) of the University of Zürich, mainly in the field of health promotion in children. Her main focus during the last years was on physical activity promotion in children, in which she is an internationally recognized scientist. Since the beginning of the SARS-CoV-2 pandemic, she is leading an internationally recognized, longitudinal seroprevalence study in Swiss school children that also looks at clustering, mental health, lifestyle and long COVID.
