

Martin Rösli

Martin Rösli is Professor for Environmental Epidemiology and leads the Environmental Exposures and Health Unit at the Swiss Tropical- and Public Health Institute in Basel. His research focuses on various environmental topics including ionizing and non-ionizing radiation, transportation noise, climate change, pesticides, passive smoking and ambient air pollution. Among others, his research includes various cohort studies in children and adolescents.